PRESIDENT A BOUQUET. The drive gave the President a good view of the West End and gave much of the West End a good view of the President. The route was from the track over Union avenue to Westmoreland place, through Westmoreland to King's highway and Lindell boulevard, along Lindell to Taylor, over Taylor to Delmar, down Delmar to Vandeventer, over Vandeventer to Vande-venter place, through Vandeventer place to Grand avenue and thence to the Odeon,

In the residences and upon every vantage point the citizens gathered to welcome. But at the High School was an exceptional gathering. There the local Pedagogical So-ciety had arranged to meet the President, if time permitted. His programme did not ad-mit of an additional stop, but he rose and bowed and smiled with exceptional gra-ciousness to the hundreds who were grouped in front of the High School.

DINNER TO BE SERVED PRESIDENT AND DIPLOMATS IN CONGRESS HALL.

President Rosevelt and the foreign diplomats, with other distinguished guests, will be seated at an elaborate diner at 6 p. m. to-day in the Hall of Congresses. The Marine Band will give a concert during the repast from a point of vantage in the Administration Quadrangle. The decorations of the banquet hall, on the second floor, above the Quadrangle, are the most lavish since the dinner to Prince Henry at the St. Louis Club. The President's table, a large circular board in the west center of the room, stands on a slightly raised dais. It will accommodate twenty Sixty other circular tables will each seat

The two steamers were continually crowded, and the waits were rather long and tedious, although one boat carries the vasitors over to the warship and the other brought them back, thus expediting the movement considerably. Perfect order prevailed, and Commander Vreeland of the Arkansas remarked again that it was the best handled crowd he ever saw.

At the wharf an extra detail of twenty policemen assisted the wharf watchmen, and on the barges moored alongside the monitor sallors were on the lookout. couse here a few weeks ago, and at that time Mr. Robson declared that it never would be played again by him or any other actor. He was the sole owner of the manuscript, and rights of the play, and before his death he made provision for the destruction of the manuscript. Hence "Bertie" dies with the man who made the character famous.

PLAYED MANY PARTS.

But long before "The Henrietta" was con-ceived, Mr. Robson was well known in every city of importance in the country. He played in the old stock companies, taking more different parts than any of his contemporaries, one of the old-time production which falled utterly being the only play that Bret Hartte ever wrote alone-"Two Men of Sandy Bar."

He was at different times associated with Joseph Jefferson and many of the greatest stars, but his greatest fame came after he and William H. Crane began their career

It is chiefly remarkable for wonderful triple-expansion engines, which allow no steam to escape, using the same steam over and over again. The exhaust fans and ventilators and the water-tight compartments, which make one part of the vessel independent of another should a shot hit it or a submarine mine or obstruction be struck also excite interest.

Remarkable, too, is the arrangement of electric dynamos, which supply the power by which the big guns are loaded; ammunition holsted, and the coal brought to the furnace doors to keep the ship up to its full capacity as an engine of destruction and as a means of defending harbors where float the Stars and Stripes.

INTERESTING SEA FIGHTERS. Mr. Robson's real name was Robson Stu art. He was born March 4, 1836, at Annapolts, Md., and came of an old Southern family. Before going on the stage be served for a year and a half as a page in the House of Representatives, while Senator Gorman occupied a similar position in the Senate. Edwin Booth, another of his boyhood friends, had urged him to go on the stage before, but on the toss of a coin at Senator Gorman's solicitation he first tried his hand at a political career.

He appeared first in a tragedy, "Uncle Tom's Cabin As It Is," but was so heartly laughed at by his friends that he never afterward esseyed a tragedy part. Mr. Robson leaves a wife, who was known on the stage as Miss May Waldron, and two children, Stuart Robson, Jr., and Mrs. Morton S. Crehore, a daughter by Mr. Robson's first wife. $18.60 to Atlanta, Ga., and Return

McMurray was on Admiral Schley's flagship, the Brooklyn, at the battle of Santiago During that fight he was on duty at the engines, where the temperature ranged above 160 degrees, the boilers working with forced graught, and all the fuel that could be piled in them.

The excliement of the chase was denied to McMurray and his associates. It was their part to remain in the black, roaring, hot cavern and give to the vessel all the speed possible to catch Cervera's fleet and annihilate it.

The din of battle above told them nothing of the fight, nor did they know at what moment a shell might send them to the bottom of the Gulf without ever having seen the enemy's guns in action.

"Oh# well, we did miss the excitement," said McMurray, but we helped to whip the Spaniards, didn't we?"

Peter Duffy, as modest as his old comrade, both being of the type which has made American seamen famous for bravery and ability, repiled:

CROWDS CURIOUS, BUT QUIET.

Solitary, White-Robed Figure at Palace Window Afterward Watches British Ruler Drive Away in Brilliant Sunlight.

Rooms, April 29.-King Edward visited Pope Leo at the Vatican this afternoon, going direct from the British Embassy in closed carriage.

He was accompanied by Colonel Lamb, the British military attache. The carriage bearing the King was followed by another entaining members of His Majesty's suite. The King wore a fleid marshal's uniform. He had no escort, except some policemen in plain clothes, and no troops lined the streets, in contrast with what was done at the time of Emperor William's visit to the People gathered on the streets and looked with curiosity, but they abstained from any demonstration.

It was also remarked that, contrary to the usual etiquette, King Edward did not lunch at the British Embassy, but had luncheon at the Quirinal, and after a brief stop at the Embassy drove to the Vatican. Thus far did King Edward give way to the Vatican's desires

The Vatican is perhaps the most ceremonicus court of Europe. It is undoubtedly one of the most picturesque, and all cos-tumes worn there are of medieval times. As King Edward's carriages entered the court of San Damaso, surrounded by the well-known loggia of Raphael, and which has been trodden by the feet of every sovereign who visited Rome, with the excep-tion of the present Shah of Persia, his Majesty was saluted by a battalion of the Palatine Guards in full uniform. Tattoo was given on the drumheads; there was no music, as there are no papal bands. It is declared that since the grotesque renbugies on the occasion of the visit of the Emperor of Germany the experiment of having music has not been repeated. GREETED BY NOTABLES.

When the royal party arrived af the grand staircase leading to the papal apartnent King Edward was greeted by the Marquia Sacchetti, who acted for Prince Ruspoil, the introducer of sovereigns, who is ill; Monseigneur Merry del Val and Prince Antoci-Mattel.

At the upper landing there were grouped in imposing array other ecclesiastics, who formed a characteristic and magnificent assembly. Among them were Monseigneur de Azevedo, the Papal Major Demo; Monseigneur Piffer, the Papal Sacristan: Moneigneur Constantini, the great almoner Monseigneur Grabinski, Secretary of the Congregation of Ceremonials; Prince Rospigliosi, commander of the Noble Guards; Count General Pecci, nephew of the Pope, ommandant of the Palatine Guards; Marquis Serlupi, Master of the Horse, and Maor Tagliaferri, commandant of gendarmes Behind this group, attired in brilliant uniforms, were the Knights of the Cape and chamberlains in black velvet breeches, blouses, with stiff white ruffs and gorgeously jeweled chains about their necks, giving a touch of brilliant color to the scene.

King Edward addressed a few words of hanks in return for the hearty greetings offered him. The royal party then proceed ed between ranks of the Swiss Guards, whose halberds gleamed in the sunlight that streamed through the wide windows The hum of the busy city alone broke the

At the Clementine Hall the party was met by the Papal Master of the Chamber, Mgr. Bisleti, who was attended by personage of the secret antechamber. Upon arriving before the private apartment of the Pope the noble guard rendered military honors to the British governign. PONTIFF'S HAND EXTENDED

At the conclusion of this ceremony the loors of the Pope's apartment were imme diately opened and the aged Pontiff was reealed standing on the threshold. His hand was extended awaiting his

Even King Edward paused a moment upon seeing the Pontiff in his white garments. The Pope's face was the color of ivory, but he moved without aid and with no apparent difficulty.

The King and the head of the church clasped hands and exchanged a few words in French. King Edward passed within the papal apartment, the door was closed, and the Pope and his guest were left alone. King Edward remained with the pontiff twenty minutes. A bell was then rung, and King Edward's suite was admitted and presented to the Pope. This little ceremony eemed to please the Pope immensely. At its conclusion King Edward took his leave, the Pope crossing the room at his side and saying his last words at the door. From the Vatican King Edward passed through the plazza of St. Peter, where he was warmly greeted in English by some Scotch pilgrims now in Rome, who shouted "Hurrah for the King."

Had King Edward looked up at that moment he would have seen a figure in a window of the second story of the palace; it was Pope Leo. Contrasted with the British sovereign, who stood below in the sunlight and the centre of the animation of the immense plaza, the solitary white figure in the palace window seemed to further the idea of the Pope as a prisoner, Instead of returning to the British Em-
